Sickness in Carson

Reno Evening Gazette, Feb. 6, 1890

By the delayed Carson papers it is learned that la grippe proved quite troublesome at the State capital, M. M. Hyde, master carbuilder of the V. & T. and C. & C. railroad companys, having died of it. On the 24th of January the Tribune thought there were 200 Carson people confined to their houses by sickness.

DIED

The Morning Appeal, Saturday, January 25, 1890

In Carson City, January 24, 1890 at his residence M. M. Hyde a native of Michigan, aged 49 years.

Mr. Hyde came to this coast in the seventies, as a patern (sic) maker. He went to the work in the V. & T. shops and rapidly rose to the position of foreman of the Car Shops. He had been working at the time of his death 14 years for the V. & T. shops. In his line he was considered one of the best workman on the Pacific Coast. He leaves a wife, one daughter and a son to mourn his loss.

Mr. Hyde was a mason and was insured for $2,500. The funeral will take place under the auspices of the Masonic order, Sunday at 2 o'clock. Friends and acquaintances are respectfully invited to attend.
